

The High Tide at Gettysburg

Confederate Captain Robert McCulloch was wounded at Gettysburg on July 3, 1863. He returned fifty years later. He describes in his own words the reunion of Federal and Confederate forces in July 1913. He answers the questions: Why he fought. What was it like at the the most northern push of the confederacy, the high water mark of the Civil War. He tells of being being wounded, captured and imprisoned. Then returning 50 years later and embracing those he fought against. Nonfiction, originally published in 1915 by The Missouri Historical Society. This scanned pdf is a true copy, handed down by generations. Contents:
